Travellers should not appear to be just sitting – they need to be doing something. Preferably something interesting. The images should not be posed or stocky just a snap shot of a beautiful moment in that. Images should be thoughtfully lit/treated, professionally shot and stylish in their composition. World Backgrounds Not Easily Identifiable

This is a new campaign based on projections for an investment company. The first ads are designed to dramatise their endline “The Real World Investors” - hence we are looking for a range of real-world backgrounds to project the slogan on to. (In most cases, this will be achieved using retouching.) It could be projected onto a skyscraper in a cityscape or on a cliff in the countryside. Or maybe onto a more classic building or on the side of a factory. However, the challenge is to find backgrounds with a generic feel, that cannot be readily identified as a specific company or country. (There are a few examples attached which have been chosen to show the kind of projections we envisage, rather than fulfilling this brief.)

Child Drinking Water

I'm working on a PSA for a government project which seeks to get kids off sugary drinks and to start drinking more water. I'm looking for shots of kids, between the ages of 5 and 13 drinking water. A broad ethnic range is desirable. Kids can be drinking from fountains, glasses, sports bottles etc. I can't show any imagery that has kids drinking out of disposable plastic bottles - drinking vessels need to be reusable and environmentally friendly. This initiative will run all year. The client is hoping for images that will compliment spring/summer and fall/winter.

Musicians On Stage, Mid-Performance

Photography is all about capturing the emotion and motion of a heightened moment - for both the musician performing and the audience - bringing the two closer together than they have ever been. This new brand is all about the audience experiencing music the way the artist intends. What it is - visceral, tactical, atmospheric, passionate, up-close, real, in the moment What it is not - glossy, studio based, over posed, distant The imagery should be powerful and make the audience feel something. Photography to be used as a integral part of marketing and branding collateral for a new start up music brand that is set to revolutionise the live music experience

Humorous Yet Stressful Situations On Public Transport

Man in Antarctica

- Male, in his 50s - Preferably not showing his face but rather looking out at the view - We don't want that person to be doing anything too physical such as rowing a kayak or trekking up a mountain. They're simply admiring the scenery - either from a boat or standing on land/snow. - We don't want the shot to look too cold (strange request, I know). What I mean is that we want a clear blue sky with plenty of sunshine rather than dark and gloomy clouds. - The person can be part of a group but have a clear focus on one person. The shot may only show the one person. Either one is fine.

CROWD SHOT from the 2015 New Look Wireless Festival

See the ref image - (We love it but it's not available) The image we'd like would ideally be an evening shot, with lots of cool lighting and perhaps fireworks like the reference. It needs to be a wide shot of the stage, so quite far back in the crowd so that we can add camera moves/pans/zooms.

Thriving African Businesses

We require images that show African businesses thriving across the following sectors : Infrastructure, Telecoms, Financial Services, Extractives, and agribusinesses. Although these are our main sectors good pictures from other sectors like car rental are all fine to use. The pictures should show established businesses or businesses, so when you look at these pictures there is a sense of inspiration and success. There is also an element of our initiative connecting international business with local businesses, so if there are pictures of an white business man negotiating or engaging with a black business person, that will also be great. Finally we will be providing training to businesses through our capacity building programme, so if there are pictures of a dynamic workshop, where it clearly shows training or a business type holding up a certificate. 60-67 Year Old Doing Something Fearless Criteria's are: -featuring at least one adult 60-67 — visual age is important as well, making sure not too young or too old – the sweet spot is 65 -could be a couple, a grandparent, with a group of friends, or alone. -must be doing something fearless we can write a “FEARLESS IS” headline to. Some ideas: -being active: playing sports (pickup football, soccer, tennis, etc), running, kayaking, -being creative: cooking, making art, woodworking, working in a garage -being bold: exploring, hiking, having inherent personality -would be ideal to see a face, but open to facing away from camera as well - Caucasian preferred.

Cooking in a Modern Kitchen, Focus on the Chef's Knife

I'm working on a kitchenware project, and my first item is going to be a chef's knife. I need to get a landing page up with one beautiful image. I'm pretty flexible with most all of the requirements below, but the picture has to have a chef's knife in it (not even the whole knife...as would probably crop out some portion or all of the handle so it wouldn't be an identifiable brand) - someone preparing food in a modern kitchen. ideally closeups of potentially just their hands/torso with the focus on the food, knife and cutting board/counter/kitchen etc. - white background coloring (white counter, white marble slab board) is preferred, but not required. wood is fine too. just nothing too loud (no red cutting boards etc.) - ideally close ups of knife in action slicing/chopping/dicing, or a knife sitting alongside some already cut food (to indicate the knife was just used) - landscape orientation (or ability to crop to a landscape with resolution high enough) - like the "kinfolky", textured style, but certainly not a requirement

London 'Alive' Street Scene - Leaving Empty Space for a Car (We'll Composite in)

EXACT angle please, (See refs) London Street Scene for car composite (we'll add in the car) for a car hire company. NEEDS TO FEEL warm, energetic, have depth of field and MUST have people in the shot to give the street a more 'alive' feel. Ideally at early morning or early evening to give scene interesting light. WHO IS IT AIMED AT? - This service is predominantly aimed at millennials and people who want to 'unlock' London, so the scene should have an element of vibrancy to it e.g somewhere in Shoreditch (just an example). A NOTE ON THE TWO DAY TIME REF IMAGES: They have the correct composition and angle we feel would work best for the scene. The angle of the road allows the car to be displayed at a dynamic view, HOWEVER please bare in mind that even though they have the right composition, they are not correct tonally or content wise. The ideal shot should have more interesting light, contain people and feel 'alive'. LANDSCAPE FORMAT (Horizontal) images please. One of the uses will be for a responsive website so bare this in mind if you can. Wider pana shots welcomed. ANY recognisable faces should be released (we can do some editing so please submit if you are not sure) and ANY obvious places taking up the whole scene would also need to be released. (again please submit if you are not sure)

UK road, Full Autumn Colour

We are looking for a beautiful colour shot, in landscape/widescreen format, of a road running through Autumnal countryside. - The image is to be used as a backplate for some other elements that will be shot (a recovery truck and crashed car, and a deer - see visual), so images with lots of space are a bonus. - It's for a UK client, so although the road/countryside doesn't HAVE to be the UK, it must look like it could be. - The road/shot needs to be empty of traffic and people, and have an area where headline text can be placed. - An open/epic/widescreen feel is what we're really after, rather than a 'tunnel' of closed tree cover, but we're open to the right image if you have one you think fits. - Lighting conditions are not set in stone, finding the right composition is most important. Low sun/golden hour kind of light would be preferred to really bring out the Autumn colours, but show us what you've got!

Residential Swimming Pool Environment

One person or two, middle-age, NOT looking in camera, needs to exude luxury.

Amazing city pic that says 'Tech city'

The cover needs to reflect the main focus of this edition of the magazine – the rise of Tech Cities around the world. The client doesn't want simply a cityscape image – it has to mean something, be abstract if necessary and reflect 'cities in the digital age'. Mostly at street level. Perhaps at dusk though i'm open. One of the big stories is not just the technology that is developing, but also the human talent that is fueling these tech cities. She referred to the bearded hipsters of shoreditch, although I'm not sure we could realistically turn them into a cover! Technology means that smaller, less fashionable cities can now compete with the giants, and within giant cities, certain often less fashionable districts (such as east London) are now competing with the finance districts. The other comment the client added about the theme was that digital equals creativity and constant disruption to the establishment. No specific location, open to interpretation.

Georgian House with Big Beautiful Garden

For this shot we are looking for a big beautiful Georgian house in Britain. The house will have to be detached, and have a big, well kept, elegant looking garden with a massive lawn. Why become a GP (Doctor)? - UK only

This is a piece aimed at medical students giving them incentives to becoming a GP doctor in the UK - It's about why becoming a GP is a wonderful career choice. Ideally the tone would need to be enticing, fun, colourful. The focus is to make it engaging for students. Possible ideas so far - 1.... "From all walks of life" - the piece talks about how as a GP you come across all different kinds of people of all ages and all walks of life. It offers rich opportunities for human to human encounters. "If people fascinate you, then you should seriously consider training as a GP". 2... Starting a new career. As a career piece a possible route could be along the lines of opening a door to a new career, a new start, new light, new journey.... 3.. still along the lines of meeting people is the idea that a GP can form good long-term relationships with patients. So perhaps there could be something along the lines of caring and watching things grow. But the client wants to avoid straight doctor/patient pics as the focus is to make it engaging for students. - "You can follow and support a patient and their family through the inevitable challenges that happen over a lifetime resulting in a depth of connection with your patients that is unparalleled". 4. Time - it is quicker to get the necessary qualifications as a GP. 5. Flexible hours - once training is over GP has more scope for part-time and more flexible working hours. Any other visual/conceptual ideas welcome.....

SAILING - speed, spray of waves, non-specific high tech boat

I'm looking for a sensational image which can run on a single or double page in the magazine. It needs to have speed and rushing water and ideally some sort of high tech boat. The boat should be non-specific (the piece mentions the Americas Cup, but the image does not need to be from this event as long as it's generic enough). The boat does not have to be recognisable – perhaps seen through the spray of waves? More will be paid for a double page spread.

Mexico, both Caribbean and Pacific side

Instead of getting real specific like I've done with the past briefs, I'm starting over-- first by saying I want you to be a part of our catalog revolution. I've worked with many of you the past few years and our catalogs have raised the bar in Vacation Wholesale due to your wonderful skill set toward imagery. It's about the message and product we sell, but ALL about the photography that first grabs hold of their attention. I am looking for FRESH, NEW, DYNAMIC, EMOTIONAL imagery that showcases what Mexico is about and what will get our clients on the plane immediately. Give me WOW moments. Different perspectives, off-the-beaten-path paradises, open arms to new cultures, emotional journeys. I've actually gotten chills from your photography combined with our copy writing upon opening the first few pages of our catalogs. I ask that you help us raise the bar even more while keeping the price tag down. I'm an artist and respect the art form, but a budget from Abercrombie and Kent is what we don't have with our catalogs. Thank you and hope we can work together.

SF Urban Skylines, Buildings, Interiors, Street, People

Looking for images and videos in a "Gotham" style for a social media project to tell a murder mystery crime story set in the city (ambiguously SF) but featuring lots of mood, environment, and object shots in a consistent style. We want to build a library of shots that can then be used by authors in building the story. The library will need to include:

1. Mood shots from the city such as beautiful skylines, building exteriors, city life, bustle, moments, people, humorous, dramatic, quirky, etc.
2. Murder Scene Shots: 5-10 staged homicide murder scenes with the body under wraps so that it is abstracted, but helps establish where the crime has occurred from different angles, etc. Some staging/set but can be hasty and extemporaneous as the whole point is to be gritty and real with a consistent style.
3. Murder Scene/Key Scene Walkthroughs: set of photos where murders have occurred to help establish the setting and environment as the detectives explore the scene. Similarly, walk-throughs/details from what could be key witness interview settings (mansion, house, shack, apartment, etc.)
4. Interior Moments: interesting details/moments from interiors of buildings (police station, interrogation rooms, coffee room, break room, men's room, train station, rental car place, beautiful house, etc.) that is idiosyncratic and interesting to share.
5. Everyday Objects/Moments: objects that can be props for storytelling and character exploration in a way that photos are used on text messages/social media. Donuts, spilled coffee to show a disaster, broken pen, great pen, clipboard, stack of notes, basically everyday objects that could be woven into a story. All photos have to have a consistent visual style so they belong to the same "family" - loosely similar to the TV show "Gotham". We are looking to timebox the time from a photographer and get a good spread of shots belonging to these different categories that can create the bank that Authors can then draw from. Quality has to be distinct POV and style but not overly artistic or over-produced given gritty, real feel of the medium.

Images that would make customers, in a similar financial position, see themselves in whatever they're doing, wherever they're hanging, or wearing. Images with emotion and life are best, thinking a street fashion blogger / W magazine but of the wealthy. Let's avoid anyone famous or recognizable.

Upscale Country Club Living

Need approx 3 images which show people enjoying life. They will be used to represent the kind of life experienced at a high-end community. Needs to be able to pass for Florida so no mountains in background. Can be a couple hanging out, going golfing, having a casual bite to eat at the club. Can show an extended family that will represent a family get together. Can be a parent and child, having fun, maybe golfing or afterwards. The main thing is that it captures a real moment, not staged. Natural warm Florida light. There can be flexibility in subject matter as long as the people look like the people one would run into in a high-end country club community. They have wealth, but they are relaxed and casual. Not dressed up or formal. Must be comfortable. Model released.

Woman Drinking Coffee After Exercising

We're looking for a photograph of a 25-35 year old woman in unique workout gear. She's got individuality. Not a cookie-cutter gym rat. She adds flourishes to her outfit that others might question (bright colors, mismatched designs, interesting hair style, funky hat, etc.). We see her post workout enjoying a cup of coffee. She could be at home or on the streets in an urban environment. There's a feeling of irony in the composition. She would stand out in a yoga class or on the jogging trail. Overall notes: The goal of the shoot is to capture someone totally comfortable in their own skin and that they don't care what others think. They're a unique individual and proud of it. Casting notes: Ideally Hispanic female 25-35; fresh-faced, fit but not hyper fit or supermodel; unique haircut or longer hair with potential to style for post-workout, subtle tattoos ok, hip youthful sensibility a plus. Wardrobe notes: Hip late fall/winter workout wear, with a hint of irony. Outfit needs to have some unexpected flourishes...think ironic winter hat (this runs in January), silly patterns, crazy socks, goofy gloves. It's important that the person look unique and free spirited.
