Beautiful and Busy Scenes

To bring to life our agencies new proposition (and as a set up to our new brand identity) we need striking imagery We are looking for stunning imagery that shows either CUTTING THROUGH THE NOISE - imagery that shows in a world of content and advertising and messages, our stuff stands out - (contrasting very busy scenes, such as a packed tube station, a busy intersection, with scenes of beauty and simplicity) (The composition will be a full bleed image (noise) with a contrasting image in a circle in the centre (a metaphor for our agency) (where possible should be London centric) (eg. a mobile phone with a beautiful image on it is held centred in the composition, surrounded by a noisy London thoroughfare) SHOULD BE: Beautiful imagery, but also anything that has personality to it, could be something quirky FOR REFERENCE: Agency proposition: Today we're bombarded with meaningless content from brands that is mostly ignored and worse actively avoided. Our real challenge is to create content that doesn't add to the noise. Content that makes you pay attention, makes you feel, makes you think, makes you share, and most importantly has real meaning. Content that matters. How do we do it? By seeking out and embracing positive tension – the energy in ideas that matter. The energy created by the forces pulling people, society and culture in different directions. Cultural tensions, human tensions, societal tensions, creative tensions. We actively seek out, stoke up and resolve these tensions in people's lives because they produce the most meaningful ideas. To do this, we work on the 'edges' – the spaces where different ideas, people & cultural trends clash to create something new. We constantly seek insight and creative inspiration from outsiders; from spheres of influence way outside of our clients' immediate interests. Because nothing interesting ever comes from the middle. It's in our people too – hired from a diverse range of backgrounds, a variety of different experience, ideas and cultural inspiration to every brand we work with.

Looking for an image of a hot air balloons stuck - this can be in trees, telephone wires, etc. Images of crashes or serious wrecks will not work for this.

Repicturing shopping - Lifestyle & Business

Say the word shopping and you might think of conspicuous consumption. Our client wants to move away from that as far as is possible. In the same way we want to move away from the way shopping is currently visualised. Let's face it, images of shopping are stuck in a cliché. Women with girlfriends happily posing with loads of shopping bags, women choosing between pairs of shoes while men look on despairingly, women open mouthed staring at window displays. This is not the reality. We invite you to show us a fresh interpretation of shopping. We'd like you to capture the interaction and humanity of the shopping experience. Show people enjoying themselves. Having fun and expressing themselves. Maybe balanced with more abstract images that visually represent the sense of passion and excitement, or show gift giving and receiving. Shoppers are smart and worldly. They lead busy mobile and connected lives and are looking to spend their money in ways that can support, enrich and simplify their lives. A few pointers on direction.

DIVERSITY – Capture authentic real people with a rich diverse mix of ethnicities, age and gender. Include males, females, families and friends.

SHOPS – all shops can be featured but think upmarket farmers markets, smart delis, fashionable boutiques, classy book stores, butchers, bakers, greengrocers.

EXPERIENCES – whilst we encourage capturing images of the everyday, we need to see something special in the composition. Interesting angles, slightly quirky framing and immersive techniques all help to differentiate. The viewer should feel part of the experience. Fashion is also an important area for our client along with more bespoke shopping experiences such as personal shopping or tailoring – or even just getting your coffee the way you like it!

FINALLY – emotion, fun, passion, excitement, social, community, positivity – these are just some of the words to help inform and influence your selection. All recognisable faces and places must be released.

Japanese Dining in a Japanese Restaurant-Editorial Style

Example: From sharing a meal to toasting a night out to connecting with a friend, these are the experiences we deliver as a brand. The food is important, but it's not necessarily the focus. It's the human experience and the connections around the table that are most important. This is for marketing to the Japanese audience (age demo 30-50) so we would like most people in the shots to be local to Japan (but a few expats are okay too). One IMPORTANT requirement is the photos must be captured in OpenTable restaurants (seeopentable.jp for list of restaurants). Here are the specifications: > Personal: Clean, uncluttered compositions with shallow depth of field highlight the human element of the dining experience (i.e. interpersonal connection among diners, handcrafted specialty of the restaurant) > Selective: Focus on the subject. Capture a moment in the story we're telling. Draw the viewer in and make him or her part of the experience. > Fresh: Utilize natural lighting and unposed situations. Let the vibrant colors and candid quality of the photograph come through to evoke the quality of our brand.

She interested in fashion, wellbeing, travel, yoga, tennis, skiing and is quite adventurous without being a man of a woman. She is confident in her own skin but not brash, egotistical or gossipy. She loves learning and busys her mind less with idle gossip and more with moving forward and growing both personally and professionally. World Backgrounds Not Easily Identifiable

This is a new campaign based on projections for an investment company. The first ads are designed to dramatise their endline “The Real World Investors” - hence we are looking for a range of real-world backgrounds to project the slogan on to. (In most cases, this will be achieved using retouching.) It could be projected onto a skyscraper in a cityscape or on a cliff in the countryside. Or maybe onto a more classic building or on the side of a factory. ASSIGNMENT: Truck Driver Portraits and Lifestyle

We are on a search for a photographers/interviewers to do something similar to Humans of New York, but with truckers. We would need to shoot mid-January to mid-February, and if it goes well, possibly schedule more throughout the year. We are open to any US location. It would be helpful if the photographer is in a "hub" like Houston, Atlanta, somewhere where several highways converge. If we could find one photographer to get everything, great, but we're open to hiring 3-5 photographers in different locations. We need a minimum of 10 interviews and portraits with trucker lifestyle photos by February. More details on the style/look/feel/vibe: Faces: We don't want glamour shots or Olan Mills portraits. We want larger than life photos that showcase the faces of truckers. The roughness, the wrinkles, the good, the bad and the ugly. Hands – OTRs, Towers and Food Truckers use their hands all day long and they are a great way to show the hardships of a trucker. Full portrait– Close ups are not the only way to tell a story. Pepper in a few full body shots. Trucks – Trucks are nothing without the trucker. 70% of the time we show a truck, the trucker should be the main or of equal focus. The rest should be trucks in action, but not a glamour shot of the truck, we'll leave those to the manufacturers. Landscape – The windshield is their office and they have a great view. Make beautiful what most take for granted. The road, the rest stop, the roadside sights and attractions, the unique and the mundane. Pets – A few photos of truckers and their road companions help round out our groupings. Action – Being behind the wheel is not the only part to their job. I will have more information soon. If you are interested, please put yourself forward and we will review your portfolio and contact you if we believe you're a good fit for the project. Thanks so much!

The people can be anywhere from simply pleasant/mild happy (ie. not too serious) to smiling/very happy. A photo of farm workers that aren't a family can also be good, as long as it has both genders. I'm looking for three different images. The images will be used in a marketing page on April Fools' Day, so it's ok/preferred if the images have some sort of humor or wackiness to them--without going too far. 1) Photo of people having fun on a computer. Presumably working on a funny video, or creating a meme or something that makes them laugh/smile. 2) Person listening to music, either with headphones, over speakers. Not in a concert setting. The image should tie into copy which talks about finding a music track for a video project. 3) Image that ties into copy that talks about posting something to social media and having that post take off and be successful and noticed.

New York Times - People on Devices, at Home/Cafe, etc.

Two groups- young people - college students-18-22. Plus career minded 23-30-year-olds. The New York Times - being read- or being held, or within the frame. Device/computer but ideally the NYT newspaper. Focus ideally should be on the NYT brand. But of course, the actual NYT news content cannot show faces (no model releases) nor a subject that is upsetting. Avoid models, artists, celebrity and war zone content. Does not need to be model/ face focussed. Can also just be hands, or over the shoulder etc, or cropped... In the background of the image- zero artwork/murals on the walls etc. No Ads or trademarks or real people that we need to clear for use. Muted color palettes. Aspirational. No big smiling faces and overly animated people pointing at the news. No sunsets, sun flares. Ideally people seated, or leaning/standing- at home or at a location, but not walking and reading and getting in people's way :-). Needs to be authentic.

How GREAT the OUTDOORS is... (UK feel)

Hero images to be used as a key part of a re-brand for a leading UK caravan business. We are bringing to life the experiences that caravanning facilitates. Currently their photography is either too stocky / too generic travel or too grandiose / too distant. What we want to capture is more of the caravanner's perspective. How is the mountain/river/forest/beach different when you go caravanning, as opposed to staying at a hotel, or airbnb etc. How do we capture and bring to life the uniqueness of the experience. It's about getting closer. Getting closer to the action, to nature, to each other. We want 3 broad styles of photos (but mainly the 2nd two listed below) [BROAD] Vistas that sell the dream (eg. forest from above) - they should be from across the UK [MID]  - In amongst it - eg. if it's the forest, we're amongst it, looking up - still awe inspiring, but from a different perspective - eg. Rather than just an image of a beach, we want to see more of a sense of the caravanning experience (eg. we might see the edge of a caravan, and then foot prints in the sand leading down to the water - playing up the closeness/proximity etc) - Something that gives us more of a 'feel' for the location [MACRO]  - capturing the little unique moments of caravanning life: eg. -Mud between toes -Leaves under boots -Marshmallows over fire -Two camping mugs cheering -2 campers in camping chairs in front of their caravan or tent with hot teas whilst its raining (images that capture their uniqueness - they live for this stuff, that non caravaners wouldn't 'get') - kids running around, swinging off trees etc PRE-REQS: - Must feel UK based, not north american etc - capturing the emotion and romance of the experience without it feeling too lofty/or too hipster - earthy, warm, friendly, human, evocative, tactile, visceral - With a mix of age groups, families, couples etc. - some images with tents ok, but predominantly need a mix of caravan and motorhomes

Turkey (food) and Lifestyle

It's a combination of great looking turkey recipes with a touch of humanity. It's not easy to come by. It's either to lifestyle and the food is secondary or the food is too styled, not genuine enough and no human element. The shots should not feel like gourmet beauty shots. They should feel like they were made by regular people. Meaning not too perfect yet still enticing and delicious looking.

Woman Sitting at Computer Looking Frustrated

Messy desk, genuinely frustrated due to writer's block, dressed like a small business owner not a corporate type.

Aviation- Plane Detail/Airport Shot

I'm after a really graphic and stunning shot to sum up a piece on airplanes / airports / aviation in general. Some ideas that might work: - a very graphic shot or detail of a (passenger) plane - A view from an airport (needs to be fairly generic, so the airport can't be identified immediately). Could be an aerial or a quirky detail. But, of course, if you can think of something else that would be good for this (just needs to be a symbolic image to sum up all things airline / airport in one striking picture), please include this too

People in Business Class Seats

I am doing a project of smiling happy people on a business class flight. It can focus on a single person or multiple people but it should be the customers and not the flight crew. Authenticity, fun and not overly staged are the keys to the direction I am looking for. I would prefer to see the faces of the person/ people if possible. If they look charming that would be ideal. No gender preference. No alcohol in the images

Lens flares even.

City break – family / couples People strolling in the city centre. No identifiable landmark so the photo can be used across any market. People featured on the photo needs to be warmly dressed (coat, scarves...) 3. Ski - family / couples Snow easily identifiable. If people are shot whilst skiing they should wear the appropriate ski gear (helmet). If they are wearing just bobble hats or winter wear then they can't be shown ski-ing.

Man Hanging Off A Roof

Would like to find an image of a man hanging off the side of a house. Preferably, he would holding on to the gutter/side of the roof. This would be shot from a distance - so you would see the house and have a sense of the size and distance between this persona and the ground. Images taken from directly above and below will not work.

People Having Conversation Over Meal/Drinks

Ideally the shot would be set in a restaurant with high ceilings and large windows with lots of natural light. It's for a hospitality client so I'm looking for something that has a hotel restaurant vibe to it. Nothing too casual. No families. But it should also not be too stiff or corporate. Think smart people having a comfortable, relaxed, yet engaged conversation over dinner. The image I'm looking for is about the people. Not the food and drinks. And the setting is important to set it in context but it's not about the place either.

CHAINMAIL ARMOUR - graphic studio shot

I'm looking for great images of chain suit armour. Something really visually strong and graphic. Ideally more than just a detail of the chain suit structure. I attach a few images for reference. The problem with these is that the helmet shape is just too terrifying looking. But otherwise these are on the right track. I'm looking for something that will work on its own for a full page, so it needs to be lit and shot in a beautiful way.

BOAT SCOTLAND

I'm looking for an image of a boat in Scotland. A bit like the attached, but if the boat is in a better condition, that would be good...

Images of beautiful decks that show craftsmanship

We are looking for stained decks that look very premium and high-end. They should look as if the owner 'lives' on their deck. The focus should be on the wood, but furniture/plants are important to show that the deck's owner cares about creating an outdoor living space. The more wood, the better! We look looking for really any type of photographic angle/close-up/long shots. Decks should not appear too tropical or look like a resort. The photos should be inspirational but attainable for a deck lover.

The Caribbean Islands

Instead of getting real specific like I've done with the past briefs, I'm starting over-- first by saying I want you to be a part of our catalog revolution. I've worked with many of you the past few years and our catalogs have raised the bar in Vacation Wholesale due to your wonderful skill set toward imagery. It's about the message and product we sell, but ALL about the photography that first grabs hold of their attention. I am looking for FRESH, NEW, DYNAMIC, EMOTIONAL imagery that showcases what the islands of the Caribbean are about and what will get our clients on the plane immediately. Give me WOW moments. Different perspectives, off-the-beaten-path paradises, open arms to new cultures, emotional journeys. I've actually gotten chills from your photography combined with our copy writing upon opening the first few pages of our catalogs. I ask that you help us raise the bar even more while keeping the price tag down. I'm an artist and respect the art form, but a budget from Abercrombie and Kent is what we don't have with our catalogs. Thank you and hope we can work together.

The benefit of being in your new home or office

It is about telling stories of the arrival at your new property (home or office, inside or outside) on our new homepage. Styling of the property is naturally composed (clean and tidy, yet real). We want authentically arranged situations, enriched by real life details. Framing or unexpected perspectives add the excitement. We don't want installed or cosmetic situations (hotel room or furniture shop like). Real situations and the viewer must be able to identify himself with a situation. Natural mid to slightly darker tones: picture sharp and clear with a focal area of lightness (not in the middle! of the picture) Storytelling (the success of having found a new property). The focus on subjects of the story must engage with the user. but no detail rich content. Focus on certain objects. Rather no people or no focus on people. If people best to crop them or hide behind structures. Activities to be real and authentic. We never show people from behind. Focal areas have to be to the left top or right side. Not in the middle. The bottom part of the picture is calm (not to distract from navigation on the website). Size of the image: (no smaller than) 1920 x 578px , digital usage Outstanding, forward thinking, exciting and focus on the destination (fulfilling a dream of a new home / office) If you have something that allows motion effects (e.g. water in the swimming pool) - welcome.
